New York Times bestselling authors of The Carrot Principle and All In are back with The Best Team Wins, an exciting new major business book release (Simon & Schuster Feb. 13, 2018) and a dynamic new keynote.

Organizations are moving to team-based work in droves, but 96 percent of executives cite poor collaboration as the main sources of workplace failures. It might be the most-pressing question businesses must address: How can managers better lead teams to improved performance given the volatility and challenges teams face today:

- Increasing speed of change
- Emergence of a global, "gig" economy
- The rise of the Millennials
- Need to work more cross-functionally

Gostick and Elton's research shows a set of leadership disciplines makes the biggest difference. They help audiences apply the new science of leadership to speed productivity, inspire innovation and robust debate, manage generational differences, and create true alignment around customers.
